Carolyn Jefferson-Jenkins is the first African American woman to serve as president of the League of Women Voters, where she focused on increasing voter participation, campaign finance reform, and health care for underserved populations. Jefferson-Jenkins continues to be an advocate and activist for civil rights, social justice, educational excellence, and stronger citizen participation in the electoral process. She serves on numerous boards and advises community-based organizations including Howard University's Women Ambassadors Program. She also has contributed to numerous journals and books on election reform.
